

Rock Mill House, Stroud

Chairman Steve Mills writes:-

We were recently contacted by the owner of Rock Mill House, a short way from Salmons Springs near Stroud, along the road towards Painswick. He is trying to find any photographs or plans of the mill itself. The mill had a succession of interesting uses over the centuries – part of the site housed the Rock Brewery at one time. However, it was largely demolished at the beginning of the 20th century. A surviving part was used initially as stabling, then later converted to a garage.

I realise it's a long shot, but are any members aware of any photos etc of the site?

Many thanks.

The location of the mill as shown on the 1900 edition of the OS 25 inch map may be seen on the National Library of Scotland maps website

There is a very good picture of Rock Mill House online in the Gwladys Davies Collection. Sadly it does not show the area of interest (but it is a very nice picture)

If you have not explored the collection before it might be something to do as we all become subject to the one month lockdown.

From the home page you can read about Miss Davies, browse the image list and search for particular locations.
